

WELCOME TO THE PLANT SALE 2026

There are 138 cultivars listed this year and almost 900 plants available.

Most cultivars have 3 or more plants for sale, but a few have less, so you might want to decide quickly.

The sale offers 7 new introductions from two hybridizers, Howie Dash and Elm Jensen. They adorn the inside pages of this newsletter's cover sheet.

There are also 9 cultivars never before offered in the sale, 5 old friends not offered for 5 or more years and 2 cultivars that were registered as Arilbreds, but are not considered so today (DIS).

You can help us maintain accuracy of the sale plants. When you get your plants, please record them and the year you got them. If any bloom incorrectly, let the Plant Sale Chair know so the donor can be contacted for possible identification. Our donors try hard to assure correctness, and appreciate being notified when errors occur. Mistakes happen: while labeling, rhizomes go wandering from their clump, stock was misnamed when acquired by the donor... the list goes on.

A BIG THANK YOU goes out to this year's donors:

New to Growing Arilbred Iris?

Please be aware that some are just as easy to grow as Tall Bearded or median irises while others can be a bit more challenging. The full blooded aril irises are recommended for experienced growers only as they require special environments to grow successfully in most parts of the country. Start with the “-“ designator varieties, then move up to the halfbreeds and finally to the “+” designator varieties. We recommend that someone be able to grow the “+” designated arilbreeds successfully before attempting arils.

We want your experience with aril and arilbreeds to be a successful one. To help you make good choices from the plants listed, we offer the following information.

Aril Classifications – recommended for experienced growers only

O – Oncocyclus – aril species – generally from desert environments

R – Regelia – aril species – generally from dry mountainous environments

OH – Onco Hybrid – cross involving only oncocyclus irises

RH – Regelia Hybrid – cross involving only regelia irises

RC – Regeliocyclus – cross involving only regelia and oncocyclus iris with a regalia phenotype

OG – Oncoregalia – cross involving only oncocyclus and regalia iris with an oncocyclus phenotype

Arilbred classifications - irises with both aril and non-aril bearded (eupogon) iris heritage

OB – Oncobred – a hybrid containing both and only oncocyclus and eupogon irises (no Regelia complement)

RB – Regeliabred – a hybrid containing both and only regalia and eupogon irises (no Oncocyclus complement)

OGB – Oncogeliabred - a hybrid containing a combination of oncocyclus and regalia and eupogon irises

All arilbred classifications contain the letter ‘B’, so they are easy to differentiate from aril classifications.

OGBs are the most commonly grown arilbred iris.

How much ARIL is in an arilbred will generally indicate how easy they are to grow. There is a designator in the description that tells this:

Less than ½ Aril	- indicated by a minus sign	OGB-, OB- or RB-
½ Aril	- indicated by no sign	OGB, OB or RB
Over ½ Aril	- indicated by a plus sign	OGB+,OB+ or RB+

How to begin growing arilbred iris

The less the aril content the easier to grow.

This is NOT a hard or fast rule, but a good rule of thumb.

In general, the more Regelia content the easier to grow,
the less Oncocyclus content the easier to grow.

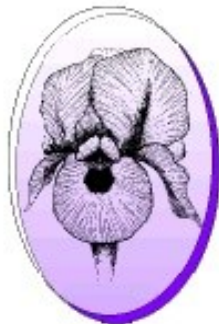

This is also NOT a hard and fast rule.

In general, OGB- arilbreds will grow in the same beds with your tall bearded iris; the closer you get to challenging, the more their environment needs to approach that of full blooded arils.

Check with local growers as arilbreds can perform differently in different locales. There are some +’s that are easier to grow than some -’s.

Theoretically, this is the arilbred difficulty chart, from easiest to hardest – there are many exceptions:
